

|  |   |
|--|---|
|  | Object: Shaft of an arrow Museum: Museum UlmMarktplatz 989073 Ulm(0731) 161-4330info.museum@ulm.de Collection: Project for the reappraisal of thecollections from colonialcontexts Inventorynumber: 2022.10952 |
|--|---|

Description

A shaft of an arrow with different black line ornaments. Below the arrowhead that is broken and above the notch the shaft is wrapped with bast.

The spear comes from Papua New Guinea and presumably belongs to the collection of Albert Daiber; a definite attribution, however, is not possible.

Basic data

|                     |              |
|---------------------|--------------|
| Material/Technique: | Bamboo, bast |
| Measurements:       | L 102 cm     |

Events

|                               |       |                           |
|-------------------------------|-------|---------------------------|
| Created                       | When  | 1900                      |
|                               | Who   |                           |
|                               | Where | Papua New Guinea          |
| Owned                         | When  |                           |
|                               | Who   | Albert Daiber (1857-1928) |
|                               | Where |                           |
| [Relationshipto location] | When  |                           |
|                               | Who   |                           |
|                               | Where | Insular Oceania           |

[Relationship to location]

When

Who

Where

Melanesia

Keywords

- Arrow
- Colonialism
- Colony
- Koloniale Kontexte
- Kolonialzeit
- Weapon