Description

An arrow with a bamboo shaft and a put on wooden arrowhead. The shaft is decorated with geometric lines elements in black and at the tip there are opposing, dainty carved barbs on the upper part. The tip is decorated with bast at two places. The shaft is wrapped with bast above the notch and below the tip, too, where it is also coated with colour.

The spear comes from Papua New Guinea and presumably belongs to the collection of Albert Daiber; a definite attribution, however, is not possible.
